New Highway To Have Home In Middlesboro

SHORTEST KNOWN ROUTE FROM GULF TO THE GREAT LAKES

U. S. Auto Ass'n Representative Presents Plan to Local Men in Grill Room at New Cumberland.

DETROIT-CUMBERLAND GAP GULF IS NAME FOR ROUTE

Middlesboro will probably be the home of the best, shortest and only completely logged, and mapped highway from the north to the south according to action taken this morning by a group of twenty business men at the New Cumberland Hotel.

A. P. Lallier of the United States Automobile Association presented the plan of his association to complete such a highway by January of next year and asked that Middlesboro be one of the cities to cooperate in this movement Investigation will be made of the proposition within a few days and a final report given.

Judge Joe F. Bosworth was named temporary chairman of the meeting and R. K. Judy temporary secretary. Judge Bosworth, often called the father of good roads in Kentucky was asked to express his opinion. He said if the proposed proposition can be put over it will mean more to Kentucky than any other road that can be built. He suggested that an appropriate name be found for for such a road and then the road pushed.

Detroit-Cumberland Gap-Gulf was the name voted for the road out of a group of three or four mentioned by those presented. When the Middlesboro association is perfected it will be known as the Detroit-Cumberland Gap-Gulf Highway Association.

The proposed highway will have as its route through this particular section, Detroit, Cincinnati, Berea, McKee, Manchester, Red Bird, Pineville and Middlesboro on through the South.

Confer With Other Districts.

It is Judge Bosworth's idea to act on this proposition if it proves sterling and connect up with the $80,000 road bond issue passed on this week for the state. He appointed vice presidents from near districts to confer with the home committee on investigation. Those name were: T. J. Asher, Pineville, White Moss, Pineville; W. W. Pawlings, Manchester; Prof. J. J. Dewall, Red Bird. A local committee was appointed by Bosworth to confer with the Kiwanis club committee on public affairs in reference to promoting the highway. That committee named was: A. P. Liebig, Chas. G. Smyth, Joe F. Bosworth and F. P. Scales.

Prof. Dewall said he hoped the highway could go along the proposed route including Red Bird as it meant life and death to his school. At present the school is located off the road back up creek and in bad weather is shut in for several days.

A sum of $500 must be paid to the automobile association if the proposition is taken up by Middlesboro, Lallier said this morning. This pays for extensive advertising of Middlesboro published in the thousands of maps put out by the association every six months. These maps will be distributed at all points along the route from the north to the south

Headquarters To Be Here.

His suggestion for organization was to have a president and vice president with headquarters in Middlesboro and a vice president of the association in every state through which the highway passed, chairman in every county and two assistants chairman

He also asked that Middlesboro consider a camp site or tourists in connection with the highway. This would mean money to the town, he says, because there is no campsite between Lexington and Knoxville.

Lallier says if this city takes advantage of this highway the wonderful scenic beauty in the Cumberlands will make it one of the greatest summer resorts in the country.

More than 100,000 automobiles will go from the north to the south this year, Lallier says, and Middlesboro can easily multiply the number of tourists through here by five with the new highway.

The proposed highway will be completely logged, mapped and will be advertised so extensively that tourists will find it to their advantage to come it is way not only for the comforts and conveniences but for the advantages in scenic beauty and historic settings included in their trip.

REPUBLICANS 226 DEMOCRATS 206 IS HOUSE LINEUP

In Senate Republicans Have 53, Democrats 42—Socialists, Independents, Farmer-Labor 1 apiece In House.

G. O. P. MAJORITY REDUCED 150 IN HOUSE, 12 IN SENATE

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—On the face of practically complete but unofficial returns from Tuesday's election, the exact lineup by parties in the Sixtieth Congress will be: House, Republicans, 225, Democrats, 207, Socialist 1 Independent 1, Farmer-Labor 1; Senate, Republicans 53, Democrats, 42, Farmer-Labor, 1. The Republican total in the Senate is predicted upon the victory of that party in the North Dakota senatorial contest. Should final returns show the election of F. T. O'Conner, Democrat, the Republicans have 52 and Democrats 43.

In the present Senate Republicans have 60 and Democrats 36. The Republican majority, 24. In the House, Republicans, on a basis of unofficial returns, have a majority of 15 over the combined strength which could be mustered against them by Democrats and others and a plurality of 18 over the Democrats as a party unit. In the present House the Republicans have a majority of 165 over all.

CLINTON, Mass., Nov. 10.—Senator David I. Walsh, chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign, in a statement today said Tuesday's election was not so much a Democratic victory as a rebuke to standpat and retroactive forces now in control of the national policy. He said he hoped the Democratic party would now become a "militantly liberal party."

RED CROSS COMMITTEE TO OUTLINE CAMPAIGN TONIGHT

The Red Cross committee will meet tonight in W. S. Anderson's office to formulate final plans for the annual Red Cross drive which will be launched tomorrow. The members of this committee are all Kiwanians but they will assist in the drive as individuals as the club has decided to sponsor no more financial campaigns.

The members are: A. P. Liebig, A. M. Kinniard, C. G. Emyth, G. H. Talbott, H. H. Overton, L. D. Hill, R. K. Judy, R. L. Maddox, Warren Cunningham, W. C. Stair, Hugh Allen, F. R. Whalin and C. O. Brown.

MRS. MARY LOCKWOOD, D. A. R. FOUNDER, DIES YESTERDAY

By Associated Press

PLYMOUTH, Nov. 10.—Mrs. Mary Smith Lockwood, 91, founder of the Daughters of the American Revolution, died yesterday at Jordan Hospital where she had been a patient since September.

Dr. and Mrs. Johnson Archer Gray, accompanied by Miss Gladys Gray and Mrs. Frank Hess, attended the Amistice Day exercises at Lincoln Memorial University this morning. Dr. Gray will also be the morning speaker Armistice Day at Pineville Saturday at 11 o'clock.

HOTEL OPENING PROVES SUCCESS IN EVERY WAY

Decorations of Lobby, Brilliance of Assemblage, Excellence of Dinner and Music Combine To Make Evening.

DR. J. A. GRAY MAKES THE ADDRESS OF WELCOME

Something like 700 persons were present at the Cumberland Hotel opening last night and over 500 were served in the dining room and grill room. The opening, a success in every way, was perhaps the largest and most brilliant social function that Middlesboro has ever held.

The lobby and halls of the hotel were decorated in palms, ferns and many large baskets of beautiful flowers. The guests presented a brilliant array, most of them in evening dress and many were the admiring comments passed on the beauty of the costumes. The dinner, served to the guests in two sections, was perfect in quality and service. The music by the Watterson orchestra was in keeping with the rest of the evening and gave the dancers music until an early hour this morning.

A special feature of the dinner hour was the address of welcome by Dr. J. A. Gray. Mr. Schenck, manager of the hotel, introduced the speaker, referring to him as "one of the most up-to date and progressive thinkers I know, a scholar and a man unparalleled as a preacher Dr. Gray said, in part:

"My friends, it is with the sincerest pleasure I address you at this time and on behalf of the management, welcoming you to this magnificent hotel opening, which, I believe, marks another milestones in our city's prosperity. It seems like a dream to find myself under these conditions in Middlesboro, and almost seems as though I had been transported to another city and met my friends and neighbors. for the first Middlesboro I knew and the present one, are as different as night is from day

Middlesboro of 100,000 Predicted.

"I wish also on behalf of the city to express our appreciation of the broad vision of Mr. Todes and the splendid men who made it financially possible for us to be here tonight, and to welcome to our city so many representative people from neighboring states and cities. The intelligence, culture and refinement of the guests speaks well for this section of our state and predicts finer and better things in the future for us as a city.

"Middlesboro is growing. This must be patent to everyone who is in any way an observer of conditions. During the past two years we have grown by leaps and bounds. We have a thousand more people than we had last census, we are erecting five splendid schools at the present time, and these in twelve months will be inadequate for our growth; the new National Bank opened a few months ago is an evidence of our increasing wealth; our splendid theatre recently opened and catering to the higher tastes of a refined people; our golf links and club house for the recreation of tired business men—all these and more, are a splendid evidence of our ideals and visions. In ten years we will double our present population and within a generation we will have one hundred thousand people and still growing. Now this beautiful hotel is in keeping with the rest of our growth, and with the bank and theatre, sets a pace upward. We are here tonight to show our appreciation of these great men who are making Middlesboro, and promise them our heartiest support in every way possible, and hope our visitors will come often to see us."

Many Concerns Send Flowers.

The address was followed by the singing of "My Old Kentucky Home" by the guests. Artistic little flower baskets were presented to the women as souvenirs and the men were given leather bill books and cigars.

Just before the dancing began little Miss Parilee Fitzpatrick, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Fitzpatrick, of Louisville, gave a sole dance in rainbow costume which was greatly appreciated.

A large number of persons and business concerns, in and out of Middlesboro, sent flowers to the hotel. Many of the cards were lost, but the following were among the donors: Citizens Bank and Trust Co., National Bank of Middlesborough, J. L. Manring, Shelburne Drug Co., John Van Range Co., Cincinnati, Burdorf Co., Louisville, Albert Pick and Co., Chicago, Middlesboro Steam Laundry, Louisville National Bank, Lincoln Bank and Trust Co., Louisville, F. P. Scales, Watterson Hotel, J. Kenard and Sons, St. Louis, American Trust Co., St. Louis, J. P. Bono, Chattanooga, Phoenix Hotel, Lexington, Westgate Hotel and Usona Hotel, St. Louis, Mr. and Mrs. S. Todes, Baltimore, Plaza Hotel, Louisville, Blackstone Hotel, Chicago Riviera Hotel, New York, Bell County Lumber Co., and Altman's.

CHANGE DIVISION PHONE MANAGER

I. K. Webb of Louisville Succeeds D. F. Turnbull in Cumberland Company.

L. K. Webb of Louisville has been appointed division manager of the Cumberland Telephone and Telegraph Company for the State of Kentucky, succeeding D. F. Turnbull who has been transferred to Nashville as Division Manager for the State of Tennessee.

Mr. Webb has been associated with the Cumberland Company in Louisville for the past eleven years, having been appointed Manager of the Louisville office in 1911. He has been engaged in the telephone business for 25 years, having entered the service at Nashville, Tenn., as a clerk, making rapid advancement. He has served as District manager, Commercial Superintendent Acting General Manager and Commercial Supervisor at Louisville. Although a young man, Mr. Webb has one of the longest terms of service of any official of the Cumberland Company and is one of the best known and most popular members of that organization.

Mr. Turnbull, who goes to Nashville to relieve C. M. Nininger who is on sick leave, has been associated with the company for many years and before going to Louisville served in important official positions in Birmingham and Atlanta and was for a time in charge of the Company's affairs in Tennessee. During the World War he entered the military service and when discharged had won the title of Captain. He is well known to the telephone organization and the public in Tennessee.

L. AND N. COLORED BRAKEMAN HAS HEAD CUT OFF BY TRAIN

William Burton, 38 years old, colored brakeman on the L. and N. railroad, was killed yesterday afternoon at the canal bridge when a train ran over him and cut his head completely off. Burton got off the train and ran ahead to throw the switch, when, in some way not exactly determinable, he fell and was caught in the trestle. The train was too close to him to be stopped and went over him. He is survived by a wife and several children. His remains will be taken to Stanford on No. 24 tonight.

GINSBURG OUT OF GAME TOMORROW

Star Fullback and Sloan Have Slight Injuries—Richmond High Has Strong Team.

Ginsburg and Sloan are scheuled to play on the sidelines in tomorrow's game with the Richmond High School team, Ginsburg has a shoulder injury and Sloan a sprained foot, just enough to keep them both out of the game.

The Richmond team is a heavy one and has done fine work in the Central Kentucky games it has already played The game Saturday with Richmond promises to be one of the best of the season.

The probable lineup of the game follows: Center, Rice Gibson; guards, Dan Gibson and Willie Sproles; tackles, Leo Wardrup and Sneed Friar; ends, Neal Callison and Charlie Marion; quarterback, Homer Griffith; halfbacks, Ben Vanhebr and Billie Faulkner; Fullback, Laurel McWilliams.

HARDING MAKES PROCLAMATION ON RED CROSS DRIVE

Declares Near East Relief And Oother Urgent Reasons Appeal For Greater Generosity This Year Than Formerly

ROLL CALL IS FROM ARMISTICE DAY UNTIL THANKSGIVING

By Associated Press

Washington, Nov. 10.—President Harding in a proclamation issued today calling attention to the annual membership roll call of the American Red Cross, which begins tomorrow, declared "there are peculiarly urgent reasons to appeal this year in behalf of an even greater generosity than has been necessary in some other times."

Notable among those reasons the president mentions the situation in the Near East where he asserts millions of people must look to more favored national communities such as the United States for the means of life. He bespeaks the aid of the American people for the Red Cross as one of the chief agencies and the cooperation of Americans in the support of all the organizations at work in that portion of the world.

The proclamation follows:

"To the American People:

"The assurance, based on many years' experience, that there will be prompt and generous response makes it always a satisfaction to direct public attention to the annual Membershil Roll Call of the American Red Cross. This year it will open on Armistice Day, November 11, and close on Thanksgiving Day, November 30. As president of the United States and also president of the American Red Cross, I hereby proclaim November 12 as Red Cross Sunday, and invite all the people to unite with their spiritual leaders in such observance of it as may promote a renewed consecration to the gospel of service based upon divine injunction and sanctioned by all good conscience.

Red Cross Duties Defended

"By the terms of the Congressional Charter which called it into being, the American Red Cross is charged with certain clearly defined duties and obligations. And these, it has continued, during the past year, to discharge faithfully and efficiently. There are peculiarly urgent reasons to appeal, this year, in behalf of an even greater generosity than has been necessary in some other times, because of the extraordinary demands upon such services of mercy and humanity. One of the most fearful disasters of all history has befallen the ill-fated Near Eastern area where the lives of millions of unfortunate people even now depend, and must continue for a long time to depend, on the untiring liberality of more favored communities. A very great sum is required to be raised if the emergency shall be met; and while the task is one to which all well-disposed peoples must contribute, our own country in virtue alike of its inspirations of humanity and its fortunate endowment in material possessions, must be conspicuous for both the great share it shall give, and the high spirit animating the gift. It is therefore asked that cooperation be established between the Red Cross the Near East Relief, and all other agencies which are concerned to assist in dealing with this crisis.

Great Domestic Work.

"In the domestic field, demands continue to press heavily upon the Red Cross. The government is earnestly seeking to insure every discharged or disabled ex-service man the full measure of care and help which national gratitude and simple justice dictate. The aim must be to restore every service man to the best possible health and the largest opportunity for a normal and self-supporting life. In this effort the government, the Army and Navy, have gladly availed themselves of the assistance of the Red Cross which, due to its nation-wide volunteer organization, has been a constant and valued aid.

"In this broad field concerned with the physical welfare of the people, the Red Cross, in sympathetic contact with other organizations, and the Federal and the State Bureaus, has been particularly active in the establishment and support of Public Health activities for the prevention of disease and the encouragement of sound sanitation. In its peculiar and historic field of Disaster Relief, the Red Cross has met the emergencies brought about by the large number of floods and other calamities during the past year, and is still called upon to aid the suffering in foreign lands due to war and pestilence. For these reasons, regardless of the multitude of local problems in every community, the American Red Cross deserves well at the hands of the American people.

"In the interests of our common humanity and of the service which we owe to our fellow men, I invite my fellow citizens to renew their allegiance to the American Red Cross during the period of the Membership Roll Call.

A THOUGHT

What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us?—Romans 8:31.

God sleeps in the stone, dreams in the animal, wakes in the man.—Goethe.

SUPER-CROOKS

William Allan Pinkerton, famed detective, says criminals of today are mentally far inferior to the old-time master minds of crime.

Pinkerton's explanation is that the clever crook has turned to bootlegging which among crooks is considereld as approaching respectability.

A bootlegger's customers, whom he sells stolen or doctored booch, are more pleasant to deal with than the lower-grade fences who buy the loot of conventional robberies.

Another reason why so few men of intelligence are found among modern criminals is because the wise ones have realized that the mental resourcefulness, necessary for a successful criminal career, usually pays better when applied to legitimate pursuits.

The man who invented the first gold brick, for instance, was a high type of scientific salesman, though it probably never occurred to him that a man who could sell brass for gold could sell almost anything, even snow at the north pole.

What the modern criminal lacks in intelligence, compared with the crooks of a generation ago, he generally has in a willingness to commit murder without hesitation, says Pinkerton.

The old time crook usually shot as a last resort.

Today every city has a breed of crooks who will kill as quickly and indifferently as the fictional bad man of early days in the west.

Murder and a crook's willingness to bump off is victim have become the foremost criminal problems.

In the old days when a footpad usually used a black-jack or a piece of lead pipe, his victim had a chance. Today the pistol has taken the place of blackjack and lead pipe.

The average modern crook is a coward unless he has a pistol and cocaine or some other drug to create in him the false courage necessary to make him use his gat.

Control of the drug traffic and an absolute prohibition of pistols are necessary before crime can be restrained on a big scale. Make it impossible for crooks to get pistols and drugs and crime news will become dull.

THE ANNUAL FRUIT WASTE

Within a radius of 10 miles from the center of New York City there are about 7,000,000 people who should eat fresh fruit daily. One thousands of farms not more than 160 miles from this great population there are large quantities of apples, pears and peaches, and other fruits that will be ungathered from a lack of a profitable market. Somehow the law of supply and demand does not function efficiently. The consumers of the cities would gladly use more fruit if it were furnishd at reasonable prices. The farmers are anxious to dispose of their orchard production. What stands between producer and consumer is the high cost of distribution—freight rates, commission charges and retail dealer's profits. As in all other American industries, production is abundant, but consuming power at the prices that the public must pay is insufficient. The result is to make fruit growing unprofitable, while minimizing the consumption of a wholesome food.

The absurdity of these conditions has long been realized, and various plans have been suggested for cutting down distributive costs. Co-operative marketing associations have been tried on a small scale, with only partial success. It would seem that the American farmer is still of the individualist school, and has not yet learned to associate with his neighbors in disposing of his crops to the best advantage. In some lines, such as dairy farming, strong organizations have been formed that have secured better terms for the producers. In California the associated citrus fruit growers have successfully managed the shipment and sale of immense quantities of their product, and in some other regions of the United States the co-operative idea is slowly taking root. The city buyer, too, is an individualist, preferring to buy non perishable fruits in small quantities from the neighborhood stores, instead of taking package lots at lower prices.

There would seem to be a great opportunity for effective educational work among both producers and consumers, in which state agricultural boards, farm organizations, and the rural and city press, should combine to show the advantages of a more direct distribution system, that would encourage buying in larger quantities and eliminate some of the excessive costs incident to present methods. The fixed charges, including the high rents of shops, of the thousands of small fruit and vegetable stores, seem to make necessary the great difference between the return to the farmer and the retail price, and no other remedy appears to be possible than some arrangement by which there can be a closer relation between consumer and producer.—Christian Science Monitor.

EASTERN FOOTBALL AGAINST THE WEST

By Billy Evans

That western football is commanding much attention in the east is proved by the way a number of the leading experts divide their time at the various big games.

Once upon a time it was regarded as a rarity to have some noted eastern football expert grace a western game with his presence.

Those days are over. At the Ohio State-Michigan game a score of prominent eastern football critics were in attendance.

All of them of course were loud in their praise of Ohio State's magnificent new stadium. They were very frank to admit that nothing in the east compared with it.

That is some compliment when you recall that Harvard has a wonderful stadium and the Yale bowl for years has been one of the sport wonders of the world. In addition they said equally nice things about the play of both teams.

Has Chat With a Camp.

It was my very great pleasure to sit next to Walter Camp, the dean of football critics. Naturally we exchanged opinions as to the football situation in the east and west. Camp attended the Yale-Iowa game and, of course, I was much interested to know what he thought of the Big Ten champions. In response to my inquiry on that point he said:

Iowa has an excellent team, well coached in the fundamentals of the game. Its secondary defense effectively blocked every effort made by Yale to forward pass. Quarterback Parkin impressed me most favorably. He was easily the outstanding star of the Iowa team.

In Locke I was a trifle disappointed. I had heard so much about him I probably expected too much. He played a remarkable defensive game, which I am inclined to think tired him out and prevented him from doing as well as on the offensive.

He fumbled rather badly on several occasions after being hard tackled by Mallory of Yale. The way Mallory was tackling that day was enough to make any man carrying the ball to fumble.

Getting away from Iowa, Camp paid a nice compliment to Mallory by saying that he is easily the best defensive back that has shown the east in years.

Harvard Has Strong Team

Camp is of the opinion that there is little difference between the grade of football played in the east of west. Of one thing he is certain and that is this, Yale and Princeton, the two teams to play against the west, are far from being the best teams in the east.

To his way of thinking, Harvard and Lafayette are the class of the east this year and will assert it before the close of the season. Harvard, he says, has a great eleven, with plenty of reserve strength, but will probably lack a variety of play.

Captain Goebel of Michigan by his great work in the Ohio State game made a most favorable impression on Camp, and it is a certainty that when that well-known eastern expert sits down to pick his All-American team Goebel will receive much consideration as he should.

The poor we have with us always, but the rich are often against us.

BERTON BRALEY'S DAILY POEM

VALUES

By Berton Braley

Three things give to life its worth,
Three things make it better, braver.
Adding to its joy and mirth,
Filling it with zest and savor;
They are easy to possess
And your heart will never rue them.
Here are keys to happiness,
Friendship, Faith and Love—
hold to them!

Friendship, if you want, is yours.
If you only go about it;
It's a treasure that endures,
Poor, indeed, you are without it.
Faith—though long and hard the years
It will send you singing through them;
Love will conquer doubts and fears;
Friendship, Faith and Love—
hold to them!

Friendship, Faith and Love—these three—
Make the struggle worth the trying,
Make life big and broad and free,
Take away the sting of dying;
Sorrow, trouble, paid, defeat,
Only strengthen and renew them,
They shall keep you brave and sweet,
Friendship, Faith and Love—
hold to them!

HONEYMOONERS ABROAD

BY ZOE BECKLEY

As Jack heard Stanley's voice over the wire presumably from Edna's room he kicked the door of the booth open. He felt as though he were stifling.

"I want to talk to Edna!" he managed.

He heard a muffled "Good Lord!" The receiver at the other end sounded as though it had fallen to the table. There was a murmur. Then in panic Edna's voice sounded:

"Who is it? What do you want?"

Gently Jack placed his own receiver on the hook.

From the booth he went to the clerk's desk and arranged to take the first train for Paris. Then he went upstairs to pack. He had completely forgotten Nella and she was content to be forgotten for the time. Jack packed deliberately, with an absence of hurry that had something menacing about it. It was only when he came to the revolver that a violent spasm of emotion passed over him. Then he packed this in his bag too, and his cold methodical manner came back.

His telephone rang.

"Long distance sir. Hold the wire," the operator said.

Jack's hand as he held the revolver, for the first time, trembled. Edna's voice came over the wire.

"Jack, dearest, was that you on the phone a while ago?"

"Yes."

"Good God, Jack! Why do you — what is the matter, dear? I can't recognize your tone at all. Is there anything wrong?"

He took a long time to answer. It seemed to him as though on his next words hung the fate of their marriage. Either the woman downstairs was lying, or—Edna was a most accomplished hellishly accomplished actress.

It seemed to Jack as though his heart had risen to his throat and was pounding, swelling there, suffocating him. There was a dazzle before his eyes. He struggled for breath—for sanity—for faith.

"Speak to me, Jack!" Edna's voice was almost a scream.

It was only with the most terrific effort that Jack succeeded at last.

"Edna, I am alright. And I am sure you are. I shan't say anything just now. Later I'll ring you again. I must run down to see someone at once. So long—dearest!"

But when he went downstairs Nella was gone. She was no fool. She had seen his face in time to escape.

Then Jack got into his coat and calling a taxicab gave the chauffeur the name of the hotel at which Cousins was staying.

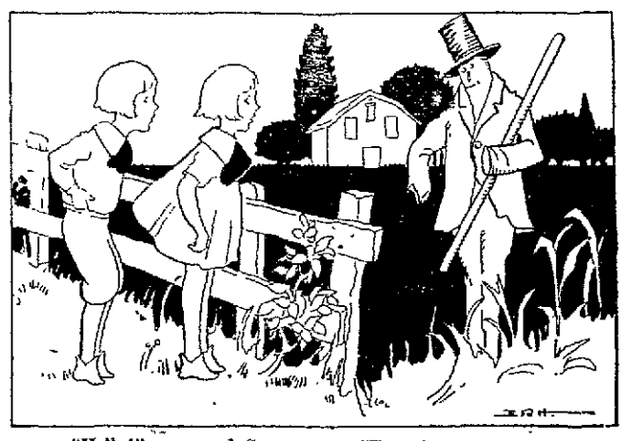
Adventures of The Twins

By Olive Roberts Barton



"Hello!" answered Scarecrow. "I'm glad to see you!"

SCARECROWS ALARMED

The Twins took Simple Simon's advice and swung themselves down to the earth on a giant cobweb.

"We'll ask Scarecrow first if he has seen Mother Goose's broom," said Nick, taking Nancy's hand and starting off.

Pretty soon they came to Farmer Smith's corn field. Farmer Smith had patched up Scarecrow until he was as good as new, with new arms and legs and a suit of his own clothes and a rakish hat. Also he had given him a new stick to hold.

Nancy and Nick picked their way between the corn rows until they came to the middle of the cornfield.

"Hello!" they called to the silent figure standing there.

"Hello!" answered Scarecrow. "I'm glad to see you. I was getting so lonesome. Are you admiring my new clothes? Well, dear knows, I didn't get them before I needed them! My last year's ones were in ribbons. They got so bad I lost nearly all my straw stuffing, and my very bones showed."

"Well, you look very nice now," said Nancy, patting him.

"Did you see anything of a broom?" asked Nick suddenly. "We are hunting for the one Mother Goose lost."

Scarecrow turned very red. "Why, I don't know," he said in a worried voice. "I—I'm made of broomsticks, you see—and wouldn't it be queer if—of my backbone, or my arms, or my gun happened to be the very one you are looking for! How can you find out?"

"We'll ask Mother Goose," said Nancy.

"Well, tel her that my arms are blue, my backbone red, and my gun yellow with green stripes," said Scarecrow. "If her broom was any of those colors perhaps I've got it."

were the admiring comments y the men from every part of se as the lobby filled with woessed in exquisite taste. Women were there from practically every section of the state and from Knoxville. Kentucky's historic reputation for beautiful women was recognized in the assembly, and the mind voluntarily turned to that fact as the orchestra started the first strains of "Old Kentucky Home."

To the question, "Who is the best dressed woman in the house?" the answer was always, "There are too many to choose." In the final analysis the woman more often pointed out during the evening was Mrs. F. E. Haun, wife of the vice-president of the City National Bank of Knoxville.

Mrs. Haun was truly lovely in a gown of sapphire blue velvet, daintily and artistically made with crystal bead designs blending harmoniously into the soft texture of the material. Her fluffy brown hair was caught at the side wth a fan shaped blue comb containing only a few blue sets which again harmonized with the blue of her gown. Her costume was completed with silver slippers.

Mrs A. A. Arthur was another who stood out as one of the most beautifully gowned women of the evening. Her gown was of black shadow lace. The soft material formed drapes at her side and were converted into sleeves at will. Her perfectly arranged silver gray hair ws truly a crown of glory. However, her attractiveness was due only in part to her lovely gown. Her stately bearing and graciousness of manner which has won her comment from two nations, lent much to her charm.

And there were other gowns of equal beauty. Every material, every style, every design. And all blended into one great group of loveliness.

TODAY'S RECIPES

NEW ENGLAND PUDDING

By Bertha E. Shapleigh of Columbia University

1 1-2 quarts milk
1 1-2 cups rolled crackers
1 teaspoon salt
1-3 cup butter
1 1-2 cups seeded raisins
1-2 teaspoon cinnamon
1-4 teaspoon nutmeg
1 1-2 cups sugar, preferably brown
5 eggs

Heat the raisins in the milk and pour over the crackers, salt and butter. Let stand until cool.

Beat eggs slightly, add sugar and spice mixed together and combine with the crackers and milk. Turn into a buttered baking dish, set dish in a pan of hot water. Bake two or three hours, slowly.

Stir frequently during the first hour of cooking, or until the pudding begins to thicken, to keep raisins from sinking to the bottom of the dish Serve with a

Creamy Hard Sauce

1-2 cup butter
1 cup powdered sugar
1-4 cup thin cream
1-2 teaspoon vanilla

Work butter until creamy and shiny like satin. Add sugar gradually and beat until both are light and creamy. Add cream a little at a time and continue beating Add vanilla and place in a cold place.

This is very good when brown sugar is used in place of the white powdered sugar.

RED PEPPER HEAT ENDS RHEUMATISM

Red Pepper Rub takes the "ouch" from sore, stiff, aching joints. It cannot hurt you, and it certainly stops that old rheumatism torture at once.

When you are suffering so you can hardly get around, just try Red Pepper Rub and you will have the quickest relief known. Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers. Just as soon as you apply Red Pepper Rub you will feel the tingling heat. In three minutes it warms the sore spot through and through. Pain and soreness are gone.

Ask any good druggist for a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub. Be sure to get the genuine, with the name Rowles on each package.

SULPHUR SOOTHES UGLY, ITCHING SKIN

The First Application Makes Skin Cool and Comfortable

If you are suffering from eczema or some other torturing, embarassing skin trouble you may quickly be rid of it by using Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist.

This sulphur preparation, because of its germ destroying properties, seldom fails to quickly subdue itching, even of fiery eczema. The first application makes the skin cool and comfortable. Rash and blotches are healed right up. Rowles Mentho-Sulphur is applied like any pleasant cold cream and is perfectly harmless. You can obtain a small jar from any good druggist.

WEAR YOUR SUIT IN THREE PIECES NOW

Good fashion advice for this winter's suit is to buy either a three-piece suit or a suit in three pieces. Because a three-piece suit has only two pieces—a dress and a suit coat.

While the two-piece suit adds a costume blouse and becomes a suit of three pieces All of which goes to prove that you never can tell.

The three piece suits are made with dresses whose skirts are of the suit material and whose blouses are usually are of a satin, silk or velvet. They are often extravagantly embroidered and the matches the blouse.

The twopiece suits are preferred by some women because they permit of several blouses. The costume blouses are chosen with great care to match the color and texture of the suit and the general effect is that of a three-piece suit.

On a short sealskin jacket is a rather wide belt made of large semi-precious stones, suspended by smaller ones. The collar and cuffs are of ermine.

FUR DISPLAY

A wonderful display of furs and fur coats is being shown for the balance of this week. Don't miss seing a real line.—TALBOTT'S.

Pleated Velvet

Accordion pleated velvet is indeed a novelty, but it is very smart. It is used to form much of the bodice and a very elaborate sash on an evening frock of apple green.

Moire Costumes

Very lovely, picturesque frocks are made of moire, with full, long skirts and tight bodices. Frequently they have long sleeves and small collars of real lace.

Unusual Color Effect.

One of the most lovely importations from Paris is a gown of deep purple velvet, lined with crepe of a particularly lovely shade of cerise. A finishing touch is a girdle of old gold.

Embroidered Crepe

White crepe is one of the most popular materials of the moment It is seen to excellent advantage in a peasent costume, elaborately embroidered in green and tan.

Three-Piece Costume

Wide bands of gray caracul trim a brown duvetyn three-piece costume that is embroidered with gold scrolls.

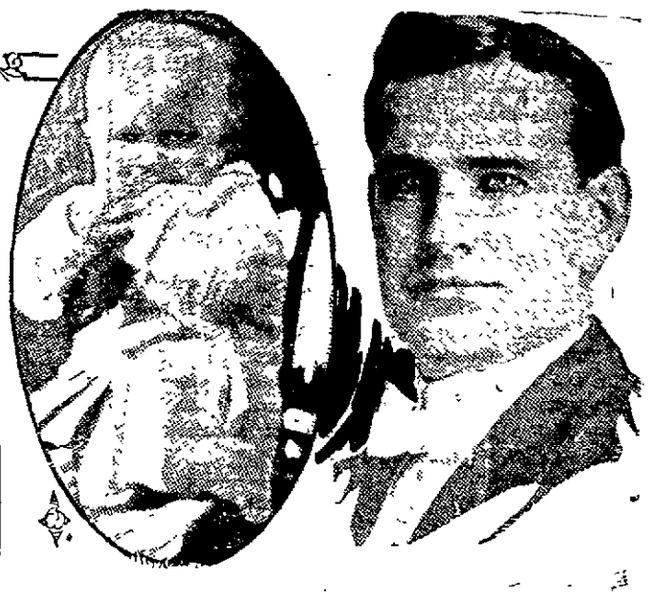
BETTY JEAN HALL 3



ROBERT, 15 MONTHS

CHARLES A. HALL

Fittest family in Kansas!

That is the honor won by Mr. and Mrs. Charles A Hall and their four children This Topeka family beat all comers, was awarded a silver cup by Governor Henry J Allen, and is now put forward by Kansas as a challenge to the whole world

The Halls were picked as the most perfect family in the Sunflower State.

"It's just a matter of using system in raising children," says Mrs Hall, who was a high school teacher before her marriage "We are especially particular about their diet and see that they get enough sleep and exercise.

"Vincent, the oldest, who passed the 13 year-old mentality test, is inclined to be a bookworm. But we route him out to play in the fresh air so he will get exercise. Likewise he is in bed every night at 8 o'clock. It's the same with Virginia, who passed the 10-year-mentality test—she must eat, sleep and exercise properly."

JAZZ PLAYERS FROM AMERICA INVADE ENGLAND

By Associated Press.

London, Nov. 10.—The recent influx of American jazz handsmen to supply music for the constantly increasing numbers of Britishers who have succumbed to the fox trot has had the effect of spreading considerable alarm among English musicians, many of whom claim to have thereby lost their jobs.

Recently there have been numerous representations to the Home Secretary alleging that American musicians have been allowed to enter England in violation of the Alien Restriction Act. It is claimed that large number of American jazzers have come here posing as students or tourists, while they already have contracts in their pockets calling for large salaries some as high as sixty pounds a week.

Musicians' unions are considering a campaign to boycott all hotels and music halls employing alien jadz players to the extent of the British The unions claim to have the support of the British Legion.

SECOND WIFE MOURNER AT FIRST WIFE'S FUNERAL

By Associated Press

Big Creek, Ky., Nov 9.—The sight of a woman crying at the funeral services of her husband's first wife was witnessed by residents in this vicinity recently, according to the bulletins issued by the Big Creek Institute, but the article explained that the first wife had been dead several years before the husband's second marriage took place. Funeral services in many instances are delayed months and even years, according to the paper.

Funeral services here are not as they are in sections where there is no lack of preachers, the paper explains. Here a person may have been dead one or more years before his funeral sermon is preached. This custom is due to the fact that it is not always possible to have [illegible] preacher on hand when a person dies, so the services are allowed to go over until there are several families waiting and then a joint service will be arranged, at which there may be one or more preachers.

CHAPTER II.

Darragh, in blanket outfit, a pair of snow-shoes on his back, a rifle in his mittened hand, came trudging up from the lake. He and Stormont watched Lannis riding away with the two horses.

"He'll make it all right, but it's time he started," said the latter.

Darragh nodded: "Some storm. Where's Eve?"

"In her room."

"What is she going to do, Jack?"

"Marry me as soon as possible. She wants to stay here for a few days but I can't leave her here alone. I think I'll telephone to Ghost Lake for a sleigh."

"Let me talk to her," said Darragh in a low voice.

"Do you think you'd better—at such a time?"

"I think it is a good time. It will divert her mind, anyway. I want her to come to Harrod Place.'

"She won't," said Stormont grimly.

"She might. Let me talk to her."

Stormont hesitated, looked at him, nodded. Darragh stood his rifle against the bench on the kitchen porch. They entered the house slowly. And met Eve descending the stairs.

The girl looked at Darragh, astonished, then her pale face flushed with anger.

"What are you doing in this house?" he demanded unsteadily. "Have you no decency, no shame?"

"Yes," he answered, "I am ashamed of what my kinsman has done to us and yours. That is partly why I am here."

"You came here as a spy," she said with hot contempt. "You lied about your name; you lied about your purpose. You came here to betray Dad! If he'd known it he would have killed you!"

"Yes, he would have. But—do you know why I came here, Eve?"

"I've told you!"

"You are wrong. I didn't come here to betray Mike Clinch; I came to save him."

"Do you suppose I believe a man who has lied to Dad?" she cried.

"I don't ask you to, Eve. I sall let somebody else prove what I say. I don't blame you for your attitude. God knows I don't blame Mike Clinch. He stood up like a man to Henry Harrod. . . . All I ask is to undo some of the rotten things that my uncle did to you and yours. And that is partly why I came here."

The girl said passionately: "Neither Dad nor I want anything from Harrod Place or from you! Do you suppose you can come here after Dad is dead and pretend that you want to make amends for what your uncle did to us?"

"Eve," said Darragh gravely, "I've made some amends already. You don't know what it is, but I have. . . . You may not believe it, but I liked your father. He was a real man. Had anybody done to me what Henry Harrod did to your father I'd have behaved as your father behaved; I'd never have budged from this spot; I'd have hunted where I chose; I'd have borne an implacable hatred against Henry Harrod and Harrod Place, and every soul in it."

The girl, silenced, looked at him without belief.

He said: "I am not surprised that you mistrust what I say. But the man you are going to marry was a junior officer in my command. I have no closer friend than Jack Stormont. Ask him whether I am to be believed."

Astounded, the girl turned a flushed, incredulous face to Stormont.

He said: "You may trust Darragh as you trust me. I don't know what he has to say to you, dear. But whatever he says will be the truth!"

Darragh said gravely: "Through a misunderstanding your father came into possession of stolen property, Eve. He did not know it had been stolen. I did. But Mike Clinch would have believed me if I had told him that the case of jewels in his possession had been stolen from a woman. . . . Quintana stole them. By accident they came into your father's possession. I learned of this. I had promised this woman to recover her jewels.

"I came here for that purpose, Eve. And for two reasons: first, because I learned that Quintana was coming here to rob your father of these gems; second, because, when I knew your father, and knew you, I concluded that it would be an outrage to call on the police. It would mean prison for Clinch, misery and ruin for you, Eve. So—I tried to steal the jewels . . . to save you both."

He looked at Stormont who seemed astonished.

"To whom do these jewels belong, Jim?" demanded the trooper.

"To the young Grand Duchess of Esthonia. . . . Do you remember that I befriended her over there?"

"Yes."

"Do you remember that the Reds were accused of burning her chateau and looting it?"

"Yes, I remember."

"Well, it was Quintana and his gang of international criminals who did that," said Darragh dryly.

And, to Eve: "By accident this case of jewels, emblazoned with the coat of arms of the Grand Duchess of Esthonia, came into your father's possession. That is the story, Eve."

There was a silence. The girl looked at Stormont, flushed painfully, looked at Darragh.

Then, without a word, she turned, ascended the stairs, and reappeared immediately carrying the leather case.

"Thank you, Mr. Darragh," she said simply; and laid the case in his hand.

"But," said Darragh. "I want you to do a little more. Eve. The owner of these gemms is my guest at Harrod Place. I want you to give them to her yourself."

"But—I can't—go to Harrod Place," stammered the girl.

"Please don't visit the sins of Henry Harrod on me, Eve."

"I don't. But—but that place—"

After a silence: "If Eve feels that way," began Stormont awkwardly. "I couldn't become associated with you in business, Jim—"

"I'd rather sell Harrod Place than lose you!" retored Darragh almost shurply. "I want to go into business with you, Jack—if Eve will permit me—"

She stood looking at Stormont, the heightened color playing in her cheeks as she began to comprehend the comradeship between these two men.

Slowly she turned to Darragh, offered her hand:

"I'll go to Harrod Place," she said in a low voice.

Darragh's quick smile brightened the sombre gravity of his face.

"Eve," he said, "when I came over here this morning from Harrod Place I was afraid you would refuse to listen to me; I was afraid you would not even see me. And so I brought with me—somebody—to whom I felt certain you would listen. . . . I brought with me a young girl—a poor refugee from Russia, once wealthy, today almost penniless. . . . Her name is Theodorica. . . . Once she was Grand Duchess of Esthonia. . . . But this morning a clergyman from Five Lakes changed her name. . . . To such friends as you and Jack she is Ricca Darragh now. . . . and she's having a wonderful time on her new snow-shoes—"

He took Eve by one hand and Stormont by the other, and drew them to the kitchen door and kicked it open.

Through the swirling snow, over on the lake slope at the timebr edge, a graceful boyish figure in scarlet and white wool moved swiftly over the drifts with all the naive delight of a child with a brand new toy.

All aglow and a trifle breathless, she met Darragh just beyond the veranda, rested one mittened hand on his shoulder while heknelt and unbuckled her snow-shoes, stepped lightly from them and came forward to Eve with outstretched hand and a sudden winning gravity in her lovely face.

"We shall be friends, surely,' she said in her quick, winning voice — "because my husband has told me—and I am so grieved for you — and I need a girl friend—"

Holding both Eve's hands, her mittens dangling from her wrist, she looked into her eyes very steadily.

Slowly Eve's eyes filled; more slowly Ricca kissed her on both cheeks, framed her face in both hands, kissed her ligtly on the lips.

Then, still holding Eve's hands, she turned and looked at Stormont:

"I remember you now," she said "You were with my husband in Riga."

She freed her right hand and held it out to Stormont. He had the grace to kiss it and did it very well for a Yankee.

Together they entered the kitchen door and turned into the dining room on the left, where were chairs around the plain pine table.

Darragh said: "The new mistress of Harrod Place has selected your quarters, Eve. They adjoin the quarters of her friend, the Countess Orloff-Strelwitz."

"Valentine begged me," said Ricca, smiling. "She is going to be so lonely without me. All hours of day and night we were trotting into one another's rooms—" She looked gravely at Eve. "You will like Valentine; and she will like you very much. As for me—I already love you."

She put one arm around Eve's shoulders: "How could you even think of remaining here all alone? Why, I should never close my eyes for thinking of you, dear."

Eve's head dropped: She said in a stifled voice: "I'll go with you. I want to. I am very—tired."

"We had better go now," said Darragh. "Your things can be brought over later. If you will dress for snow-shoeing, Jack can pack what clothes you need. Are there snow-shoes for him too?"

Eve turned tragically to her lover; "In Dad's closet—" she said, choking; then turned and went up the stairs, still clinging to Ricca's hand and then drawing her with her.

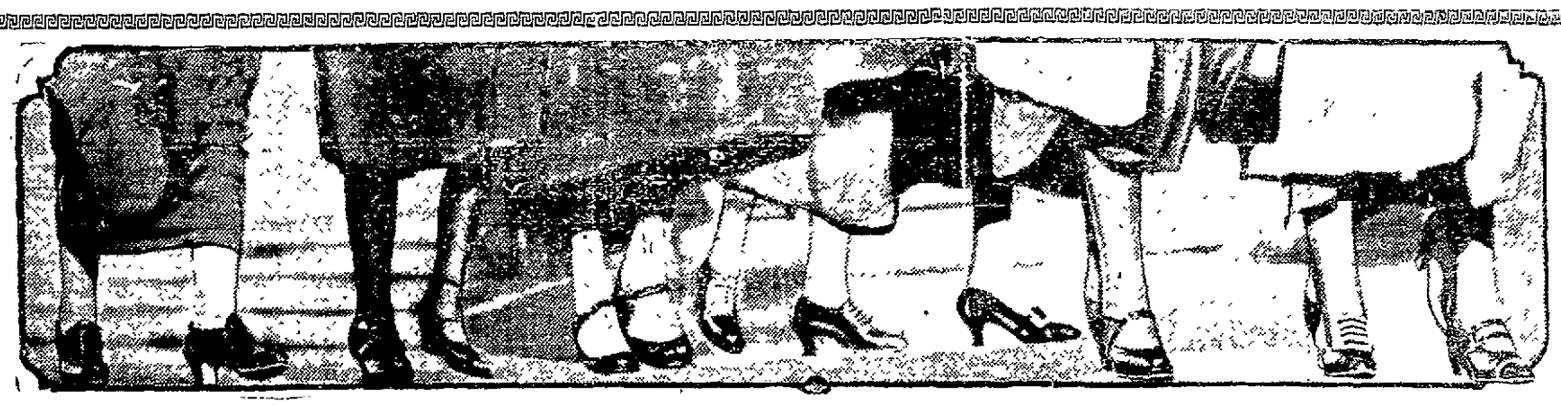
NOT THE SKYLINE BUT THE SKIRTLINE OF NEW YORK



New York, Nov. 8.—This is the first exclusive view of the great New York Skirt Line.

It was taken at great risk of life on the pavement of Fifth avenue.

As the shopping hordes came sweeping down, the camerman took one look and ran.

But he got his picture.

It shows that despite all decrees of fashion, the New York Skirt Line has not yet fallen—on the average.

It still ranges from eight to 13 inches above the ground—

Without the wind blowing.

Thieves who robbed a Newark church didn't know much about what they were getting into.

19 Year Record for Pee Gee Mastic Paint

Home of Mrs. T. G. Green Eatonton, Ga.

Down in Eatonton, Georgia, you'll find real proof of the splendid wearing qualities of Pee Gee Mastic Paint. It was used there some nineteen years ago on the home of Mrs. T. G. Green, who writes the following letter:

"My house was painted with Pee Gee Mastic Paint nineteen years ago, and I want you to estimate what will be needed to go over it ags

The house is in splendid condition although such a long time has elapsed since it was last painted. One room in which Pee Gee Flatkoatt was used nearly twelve years ago is in good condition still, but I want it freshened up."

The great durability of Pee Gee Mastic Paint is due to its 50% of Zinc content ground in pure Linseed Oil and White Lead, making it a Double Pigment Paint.

Pee Gee Mastic Paint produces a tile-like film which successfully resists the elements, does not crack, peel or chalk off.

The high zinc content gives Pee Gee Mastic Paint its unusual covering and wearing capacity. It is by far the most economical paint you can use.

For interior walls and ceiling, use Pee Gee Flatkoatt, the modern, sanitary, durable, flat oil finish. Comes in 24 deep, rich velvety colors.
